New Pavilion to Debut at AADE 2010 Annual Meeting

Do you have an "App for that"?

Then don't miss this opportunity to showcase your mobile application to over 3,500 healthcare professionals. With the explosion of smart phone sales and the daily development of new applications for those devices, there are more opportunities to provide diabetes patients and educators with new tools to monitor and manage diabetes and nutrition statistics. AADE is offering a new showcase on the exhibit floor for these "apps". The Mobile Application Pavilion will give developers the opportunity to demonstrate their newest technologies for hand held devices. Pavilion kiosks will be provided as an area for developers to promote their presence and give the space necessary to demo the apps to a group, provide a visual identity for your company and a small exhibit space to display and distribute literature. This pavilion will be heavily promoted on the AADE website, in communications with diabetes educators and in onsite materials distributed to all attendees. Be a part of this emerging technology showcase and reach thousands of diabetes educators and their patients.
